Decking

"Al fresco" living is here to stay. More and more of us are spending our leisure time outside, enjoying a lifestyle that seems much more continental than that we've been used to. Decking is the perfect solution to sloping sites or for terracing. A customised and comfortable area that is neither house or garden, but an enjoyable combination of both. All timber decking is likely to become slippery when wet or in situations where standing water is present. So it is important to have a slight slope on the boards and keep the deck clean.

The plain clean boards of a deck can make an ideal setting for showing colourful plants to great effect and an impressive walkway that joins the garden with house is another novel use for deck and balustrade.

Jak-deck kits

Here's a quick and easy way to create a deck wherever you want one. The Jak-deck kits are available in three sizes. These can be assembled easily and used on their own, or joined together to create whichever configuration you might want.

All our decking boards are Jakcured, which means they are protected from rot and insect attack for 25 years. By avoiding rot your deck will be less slippery and unsightly.

Another benefit is our boards are grooved, which will make them safer and being wood it will be much warmer and more comfortable to walk on with bare feet.
